

My mother's hands they held me close the day I came to earth.
 Tender, kind, and caring they welcomed me at birth.
 They stroked my face, combed my hair, and showed me so much love.
 A child knows her caring hands are a gift sent from above.
 Carefully her hands taught me so much that I now know,
 to cook, to clean, to garden, and to write and sew.
 Her hands held the books that taught me how to read in my early years.
 During times of sadness caressed my face and wiped away my tears.
 They lovingly held her grandchildren the way only Nana can.
 She played and laughed and loved them all until this earthly end.
 As I hold her hand, she steps through the veil to follow our Father's plan, when it's my time she will be waiting there to hold me close again.
