VISITATION

A cooler nearby, a beer in hand,
Laughing loud, like life was grand.
He toasted friends, both near and far,
Under open skies and evening stars.
Now the greens are still, the lakes feel wide,
Yet we feel him there, right by our side.
In every ripple, every drive,
In shared cold beers, his spirit's alive.
So here's to the man who lived it true-
With rod and club and laughter too.
Though he's gone ahead, he's not far away,
He's just playing the back nine of a brighter day.
